A Group of Handsome Sample Dresses Containing Some Original French Models

Virtually all are copied from French dresses and a few are the original models themselves. There are afternoon dresses, street dresses and dinner gowns of the finest materials made in original ways and not two alike. Of velvet strikingly embroidered, of tricotine and tricolette used in combination or alone, of gabardine, charmeuse and crepe de chine. The newest trimming ideas are shown in them, including fringe of all widths from the narrow to full skirt width. There is much beading, embroidery and a generous use of tassels, with fur bandings here and there. These are all marked at less than the original wholesale price. $39.75.

Furs at Savings of 25%

We contracted for these furs early in April, when prices were much lower than they are today and furriers were not nearly so busy. The skins were carefully selected and the work was done without hurry, so that no detail was slighted. If we went into the market today to duplicate these purchases we would have to pay at least a third more.

Every piece is marked for exactly what it is. There are no masquerades. Every piece was minutely scrutinized before it was given a place in our stocks and we can vouch for the excellence of every fur. Everything is generously made, without skimping; the linings are of soft silks and the styles are the latest and best. A few of the prices are given here:

Autumn's Newest and Loveliest Hats

The hats are different-that is your first impression, for each hat is the product of an artist and has the individuality of Paris creation. Many-really a large number-are copied from French models, every slant of brim and each glorious, becoming line proclaiming the fact.

Soft, rich beaver, glossy felt and beautiful velvet are each used in the exact way that it should to bring out its beauty. But the beautiful material is subservient to the whole creation-a perfect hat-in which lovely facings in all the various shades of blue, beautiful and new trimmings and becoming lines are perfectly blended.
